American Farmers Confronted With Shortage of Fertilizers

WASSINGTON.—John R. Steelman, adviser to President Truman, reported there will not be enough fertilizer to meet the demands of all government efforts.

Serious regional shortages have already begun to appear, said his statement on the inter-agency fertilizer program. A report which placed fertilizer in the first rank of federal problems.

Amid the scarcity, the army has been directed to cut down its production of nitrogen fertilizer in ordnance plants, Steelman announced, because of the shortage of railroad tank cars, which are needed also for other products.

Five plants will be closed and the army's output reduced from 80,000 tons of ammonium nitrate monthly to 48,000 tons. The army has been producing fertilizers for occupied countries.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our dear mother and wife, Mrs. Octavia G. Smith, who departed this world one year ago today, May 8, 1946.

Mother dear, it's been a year
Since God called you home to rest.
The call was sudden, the shock was great,
And the heart ache is hard to bear.
But we bear the pain by knowing
You will find peace and comfort there.
We will carry on and bear the pain
With just one thought in mind,
To live the life you taught us to live,
So at the day we place our hand in thine.

—Husband and Children.

Try Out Latest Radar Devices

Full Automatic Operation Is Sought in Experiments, Says Gen. McClelland.

NEW YORK.—Completely automatic airplane landings through all types of inclement weather devices is the goal of army air forces experiments now being conducted on the west coast, Maj. Gen. Harold M. McClelland, chief of the airways and air communications service, announced here.

Disclaiming any "push-button" concept of aviation development, General McClelland, a pioneer in the AAF in the use of radar landing aids, declared that the AAF by applying known techniques expects in 1950 to be able to bring planes down onto runways with a GCA (ground controlled approach) system hooked into a mechanical pilot.

He explained that development of such a system is a natural improvement of the "drone" system of air-to-plane, with radar replacing the visual contact of the drone plane operator.

Work Under Contract.

The experiments are being carried out under contracts by the AAF and Gilfillan corporation of Los Angeles, manufacturers of the postwar model GCA units such as are installed at LaGuardia field for experimental use by Civil Aeronautics administration.

General McClelland indicated that the army air forces is following somewhat more slowly, the navy's lead in full-scale adoption of the GCA system of "blind landing" during periods of bad weather. He announced that the AAF believes it has sufficient GCA equipment to maintain 24 overseas units and 55 in the United States, with some stand-by machines at certain fields. He added that he believed installation of ILS (instrument landing system), a radio rather than a radar landing aid, would be restricted to 50 installations.

Pilots of the AAF, he reported, had made 3,000 GCA landings up until the end of 1946. No accidents were reported.

Radar is Check Descent.

As a preparatory step to completely automatic landings, General McClelland explained, the AAF intends to develop an extension of GCA that would enable the pilot of the plane to watch his descent on radar scopes in the airplane. The pilot is now talked down by a ground unit viewing radar scopes. In the final development there would be neither a ground control nor nor any reference to radar in the plane, the automatic pilot handling the flight corrections and bringing the plane onto the runway.

General McClelland disclosed that the "all-weather" AAF air route from Washington to Wilmington, Ohio, had operated five round-trip flights a week since last August with only two cancellations. On these flights the pilots fly "under the hood," cut off from visual reference outside the cockpit, from takeoff to landing.

Parasite Dodder May Be Killed by 2, 4-D

Selection of Clean Seed Also Essential

By W. J. DRYDEN

Field dodder is an annual parasitic vine, growing on lespedeza, alfalfa, clover and various members of the dandelion family. It attaches itself to other plants and sends small growth into their tissue to absorb the sap.

As preventive is easier than the cure, it is essential that only seed free from dodder be planted. Spots in fields should be eliminated. This is possible by the use of 2,4-D weed killer. While the 2,4-D also will kill lespedeza and other plants in the sprayed areas, the loss usually will prove negligible as the dodder usually will be confined to small scattered spots.

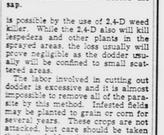
The labor involved in cutting out dodder is excessive and it is almost impossible to remove all of the parasite by this method. Infested fields may be planted to grain or corn for several years. These crops are not attacked, but care should be taken that the dodder does not continue growing on weeds in the field.

NEW SUPERIOR LETTUCE



Slobolt lettuce, developed by the USDA, is available for the first time to the gardening public. Long, upstanding Slobolt produces wrinkled, dark, satin green leaves. Plants are of moderate size.

If the plants are set 10 to 12 inches apart in the "drone" rows of airplanes, with radar replacing the visual contact of the drone plane operator.

Clinic Finds Ways to Aid Elderly People

Discovers That Aged Do Not Lose Their Usefulness.

BOSTON.—Life begins at 70 in the geriatric clinic at Peter Bent Brigham hospital, where specialists study the problems of old age.

Since its start in 1939 by Dr. Robert T. Monroe, the clinic has found that old folks are not being given credit for the vitality and productive ability they possess.

"We tend to assume that after 65 a person loses his usefulness and becomes a second-rate citizen," clinic officials said today. "This is not so. Old age should not bring the depression that it does."

Except for a little loss in speed and stamina, they said, oldsters can learn and produce almost as much as ever, but they must overcome the inferiority-complex barrier which makes them feel they are worthless because they are older.

"Confident living," the doctors believed, "will help reduce the depression that commonly plagues old folks. Naturally, anyone losing his security and friends, as old folks often do, will suffer a natural depression. However, this should not be mistaken for senile psychosis."

A plan of rehabilitation to give people in their later years a new lease on life and a chance to contribute to society is the clinic's objective.

The clinic has discovered some surprising facts about old folk. For example, fever affects persons over 65 in strange ways. An oldster with pneumonia may have only a slight fever, but he may develop a relatively high fever with a lesser ailment.

Tests on 7,900 patients showed that high blood pressure occurred in 66 per cent of old women and 60 per cent of old men, thus exploding the theory that this condition shortened life. The clinic also found there was no correlation between high blood pressure and stroke.

Uncle Sam Says

This is a good story and it's about you, pop. The chapter I am reading is entitled "Security." It tells about your Payroll Savings, the easy, automatic way you are building up a comfortable nestegg for the future of yourself and your family. Best part of all, pop, is the fact that millions of my nieces and nephews have the same important place in this story of a happy future as yourself. They, too, are buying United States Savings Bonds regularly.
